

Position Announcement: Assistant Professor School of Aging Studies College of Behavioral and Community Sciences

The School of Aging Studies at the University of South Florida invites applications for a tenure-track Assistant Professor position available beginning in August, 2018, who will be appointed to a 9 month contract. We seek researchers from broad research areas related to aging that complement the existing strengths in the School of Aging Studies which are: Aging and Health; Cognitive Aging and Alzheimer's Disease; Aging and Mental Health; and Public Policy and Long-Term Care. We have a particular emphasis on applied research that is aimed at improving clinical practice, public policy, and the well-being of older adults and their families.

Minimum Qualifications: The position requires an earned doctorate from an accredited university in Gerontology/Aging Studies or a related field, to be completed by the time of the appointment. Candidates should have a track record of peer-reviewed publications and potential for external funding.

Preferred Qualifications: A demonstrated record of: 1. Ability to collaborate with interdisciplinary researchers and 2. Experience and excellence in teaching, including undergraduate and graduate teaching and mentoring graduate and PhD students.

The School of Aging Studies has 10 highly productive faculty with an excellent record of high-impact publications and research funding. The School has a very strong history of successfully mentoring and tenuring junior faculty. The School offers four degrees: the BS in Aging Sciences; BS in Long-term Care Administration; MA in Gerontology; and the PhD in Aging Studies. The School of Aging Studies, which includes the Florida Policy Exchange Center on Aging, has been described by the USF President as "one of our top priorities and is one of the University of South Florida's beacons of excellence."

The University of South Florida is Florida's leading metropolitan university and is designated by the Carnegie Foundation as both very high research activity and community engaged. The School of Aging Studies supports collaboration with faculty who focus on the study of aging throughout campus, including the Moffitt Cancer Center and Research Institute, the Byrd Alzheimer's Institute, the James A Haley Veterans Hospital, and USF Health Sciences. The School also maintains excellent global collaborations with universities throughout the US, Canada, Europe, Asia, and Australia. Further information about our aging programs is available at www.usf.edu/cbcs/aging-studies

To apply for this position, applicants must apply through the USF online application system at: www.usf.edu/work-at-usf and search for Job ID 14654. A cover letter describing your interest in the position and your relevant research and teaching experience, a CV, representative recent publications, and three letters of recommendation are required. For questions regarding the position, please contact Search Committee Chair Dr. Cathy McEvoy at cmcevoy@usf.edu. Salary is competitive and commensurate with qualifications.
