Message from the Director

OLLI members often tell us how excited they are to see Evergreen arrive in their mailboxes. Opening each edition of Evergreen feels a bit like opening a gift, a member once said: filled with the expectation of good things to come, along with curiosity about what those good things might be! We understand and share those feelings: I get to see our courses and programs as they are developed, and I am among the first to feel excitement about what we intend to offer each term. I’m excited about the possibilities each Evergreen brings and the difference OLLI makes in people’s lives. Welcome, dear members both old and new, as we start our 23rd year of operation: hope you enjoy and partake of OLLI’s fall “gift” to you!

This course will take a realistic look at features of the global environment that affect our vital interests and national security. The United States is (and, despite dire predictions, will remain) the richest, most powerful nation on earth. Unfortunately, we consistently overestimate our ability to achieve our objectives in the world--only to be frustrated and disappointed when things don’t go as planned. We will discuss possible hardheaded, non-ideological, pragmatic policies that reflect our strengths, limitations and, above all, the real world.

Fri., Oct. 21, 2016; Registration opens September 9; Deadline October 19, 12:15 PM-1:15 PM, University Village Auditorium 171XOSTSE070F

In 1803, the Marbury v. Madison case established the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States (SCOTUS) to exercise judicial review. Judicial review is the authority of the Court to declare state and federal statutory laws unconstitutional, and therefore void, when the Court determines that they conflict with the US Constitution. This landmark opinion, rendered by Chief Justice John Marshall, defined the foundations of power sharing in the new republic. Michael Gibbons, PhD, University of Massachusetts at Amherst, has received three university-wide teaching awards. He is also the editor-in-chief of The Blackwell Encyclopedia of Political Thought.

American History in No Time is an easy way to learn the basics in one sitting. It is also the perfect refresher and a great way for parents and grandparents to ensure that their families have a solid foundation. Randolph G. Russell, formerly a professional musician, now is an author whose book American History in No Time is used by several colleges. He holds degrees in music and history from the University of Miami and the University of Florida.

Suarez, a third generation Tampa native and proud USF alumnus, is a commercial insurance agent and Chairman of HART and of the Tampa City Council.

Promising research suggests that there are some things that can be done: one USF researcher has found that natural compounds have potential for disease modification. Dr. Chuanhai Cao, assistant professor at the University of South Florida College of Pharmacy, focuses his research on the discovery of therapeutics and vaccinations for neurological diseases, such as Alzheimer’s, Parkinson’s, Multiple Sclerosis, and ALS among many others.

The Reverend Dr. Bernice Powell Jackson, pastor of First United Church of Tampa, has been an advocate for peace with justice and ecumenism around the world, including serving as president of the North American region of the World Council of Churches for nine years. She just finished her term as co-president of HOPE (Hillsborough Organization for Progress and Equality) and chairs its Criminal Justice Committee.
