The primary ergonomic service that Environmental Health and Safety provides to university employees is to act as a liaison between employees with an expressed need and ergonomic professionals. On occasion, EH&S personnel may recommend limited work station or equipment modification. However, EH&S neither provides medical assessments nor offers medical advice.

If an ergonomic assessment results in the purchase of product, the department's normal purchasing policies must be followed. EH&S is not funded for, nor is EH&S aware of any central funding for, the purchase of ergonomic products.

To request ergonomic services, please complete this form and fax to EH&S Attn: ERGONOMICS.
