

Jiaosi Li

Tampa, FL

(656) 205-9833 · jiaosilix@gmail.com

EDUCATION

University of South Florida

Tampa, FL

Ph.D. in Economics · GPA: 3.6/4.0

Aug 2018 - Dec 2022

- Related Courses: Mathematical Economics, Microeconomics, Macroeconomics, Economics of Health care, Industrial Organization

University of South Florida

Tampa, FL

M.S. in Finance · GPA: 3.76/4.0

Aug 2015 - Dec 2017

- Related Courses: Financial Statement Analysis, Financial Policy, Financial Modeling, Investments

Chongqing Technology and Business University

China

B.A. in Accounting · GPA: 3.6/4.0

Sep 2010 - Jun 2014

- Related Courses: Financial Accounting, Costing Accounting, Auditing, Financial Management

RESEARCH INTERESTS

Health Economics, Labor Economics.

WORKING PAPER

The Impact of Critical Illness Insurance on Consumption and Savings

China introduced the Critical Illness Insurance (CII) program in 2012 to address persistent concerns over high out-of-pocket medical expenditures and financial risk by providing additional coverage for substantial medical expenditures. To account for the staggered implementation across regions, I employ the Difference-in-Differences (DiD) approach proposed by Callaway and Sant'Anna (2021) to examine the impact of CII program on household consumption and savings. I find that the intervention of the CII program stimulates per capita household consumption, non-medical consumption and food consumption, and reduces savings. In addition, The CII program mainly promotes consumption and reduces savings among rural households and people aged 60 and above, but no incentives for poor families, leading to increased consumption inequality. Results from event-study specifications and placebo tests support the causal interpretation of the estimates. My findings suggest that the CII program was successful in improving the financial protection of older adults.

The Impact of China's Critical Illness Insurance Program on Health Care Use and Health Outcomes (With Padmaja Ayyagari)

TEACHING ASSISTANT

USF Department of Economics

Aug 2020 – Aug 2021

- Microeconomic Principles
- Advanced Price Theory

CONFERENCE

- ASHEcon Meeting Jun 2023
- ASSA 2023 Virtual Annual Meeting Jan 2023
- Southern Economic Association 92nd Annual Meeting Nov 2022

SKILLS

STATA, R, LaTeX, Python, Microsoft Office

SCHOLARSHIPS AND CERTIFICATIONS

ITA (International Teaching Assistantship) certified 2020
TA Training (Academy for Teaching and Learning Excellence) certified 2020
Outstanding Academic Scholarship by Chongqing Technology and Business University 2011, 2013
Academic Progress Award by Chongqing Technology and Business University 2013

WORK EXPERIENCE

Finovax New York, NY
Financial Analyst, Internship Feb 2023 - Apr 2023

Shinewing Certified Public Accountants Co., Ltd. Chongqing, China
Auditor, Internship Mar 2018 - Jun 2018

Huafu Securities Co., Ltd. Chongqing, China
Assistant General Manager, Internship Jan 2015 - Jul 2015

REFERENCES

Dr. Padmaja Ayyagari	Dr. Xin Jin	Dr. Giulia La Mattina
Associate Professor	Associate Professor	Associate Professor
Department of Economics, USF	Department of Economics, USF	Department of Economics, USF
padmajaa@usf.edu	xjin@usf.edu	glamattina@usf.edu