

While USF St. Petersburg's Digital Journalism and Design master's degree program was designed to be completed over three semesters (in one year), we also recognize that many people prefer to complete the program on a part-time basis over up to six semesters (two years).

We've designed eight "tracks" for completing the program in three, four, five and six semesters, depending on term of entry. Use the chart to the right to determine which track is best for you.

Not all DID core and elective courses run in fall and spring semesters. Below, find out what your options are and plan your path of study.
