

While USF St. Petersburg's Digital Journalism and Design master's degree program was designed to be completed over three semesters (in one year), we also recognize that many people prefer to complete the program on a part time basis over six semesters (in two years).

We've designed four "tracks" for completing the program: full time beginning in the fall, part time beginning in the fall, full time beginning in the spring, and part time beginning in the spring. Use the chart to the right to determine which track is best for you.

Not all DJD courses run in fall and spring semesters. Below, find out what your options are and plan your path of study.

*Note: If you are relying on financial aid to pay for the program, you must carry at least five (5) graduate level credits each semester. To supplement the required courses for the DJD degree, students may take an online or on-campus elective from USF St. Petersburg's traditional Journalism and Media Studies graduate program in the summer to meet this requirement. In the summer, students may choose from any online or on-campus master's level offering, including MMC 6900: Directed Reading. In the Spring, students may take only MMC 6900 to supplement their schedules.

†Note: Because of the semesters in which courses are offered, students pursuing a part-time schedule beginning in the spring semester will need to either take nine credit hours in a spring semester or enroll in one extra semester of classes to keep their schedule under six credits every semester.
