RESEARCH INTERESTS

My research examines how individual, relational, and contextual factors alter the perceived meaning of parenting and parent-child interactions, and in turn, the effects of such perceptions on adolescent development and family processes. I focus on parent-adolescent relationships, including adolescent information management (e.g., disclosure, secrecy); parental socialization, including parental guilt induction, inductive discipline, and overparenting; adolescent autonomy development and family decision-making; and adolescent moral emotions and behavior.

SPECIALIZED QUANTITATIVE SKILLS

Proficient in the use of SPSS (analysis of variance/covariance, multiple and logistic regression, principle components analysis, multiple imputation) and MPLUS (factor analysis, structural equation modeling, mixture modeling, multilevel modeling, growth modeling, Bayesian estimation, multiple imputation). Additional experience using SAS, HLM, and R statistical programs.
