Teaching responsibilities include four courses per term, and include Theory and Method in the Study of Religion; History of the Development of Religious Studies (Graduate level course); Introduction to the New Testament; Introduction to the Old Testament; Who Wrote the Bible? Life After Death in World Religions; Introduction to World Religions; Contemporary World Religions; Judaism and Islam; Introduction to Judaism; History of Judaism (Origins to the 2nd century c.e.); Development of Religious Studies; Theory and Method in the Study of Religion; New Testament Greek, and Biblical Hebrew.

Religious Studies Department
University of South Florida, Tampa Florida

Visiting Instructor, 1997, 1998-2001

This one was one-year position in the department, which evolved teaching multiple sections of the the exit core courses offered by the department, Life after Death in World Religions; and a study of the Pentateuch and Deuteronomical History, as well as teaching the Introduction to World Religions.

Department of Philosophy and Religion
Florida Southern College, Lakeland, Florida

Adjunct Instructor, 1997 to 2003

Responsible for teaching multiple sections of the Introductions to the New Testament and the Old Testament at this small Methodist college.

Program for Experienced Learners
Eckerd College, St. Petersburg, Florida

Adjunct Professor, 1996 to 2003

The Program for Experienced Learners is a nontraditional approach for offering the Bachelor of Arts and the Bachelor of Science degrees to students whose careers and lives have prevented them from seeking degrees through traditional college and university programs. In this program I teach the introductory courses to the New Testament and Hebrew Bible; Issues in Early Christianity; History of Christianity, Introduction to the Study of Religion; Judeo-Christian Perspectives (Ethics). For next term I will be offering a comparative course in Hinduism and Buddhism as a directed study course for one of our students.

Religious Studies Department
University of South Florida, Tampa Florida

Adjunct Instructor, 1996

My teaching responsibilities for this year include the introductory courses to the Hebrew Bible and the New Testament, Pentateuchal Sources, and Roman Civilization for the Classical Studies Department. Previous courses have been New Testament Greek and World Religions and their Literature.

Trinity Presbyterian Church, Clearwater, Florida
First United Methodist Church, Clearwater, Florida

Instructor/Scholar in Residence, 1993-1994

The purpose of this position was to introduce modern biblical scholarship to the members of these two churches through the teaching of seminars and adult Christian education courses, which included classes on Paul, the Gospels, and the Life and Teachings of Jesus.

New York Theological Seminary

Instructor-Church History

Masters of Professional Studies Program, 1987-1988

The Masters of Professional Studies is an intensive, one-year degree program offered by New York Theological Seminary. The students' background was varied as well as their ages, from the traditional student ages to those in their fifties and sixties. Graduates of this program have continued their education in other seminaries, such as Union Theological Seminary in New York. It was the responsibility of the instructor in Church History to create and teach the full spectrum of the history of Christianity, from its origins to the present day. Additional responsibilities included student advisement and advocacy. For the year I taught in this program I received the highest evaluation from the students.

New York Theological Seminary

Instructor, Certificate Program, 1986-1988

New York Theological Seminary provides a certificate program for those students not sufficiently prepared to enter the Masters of Professional Studies Program. Instructorship in this program is a volunteer position. Within this program I was able to create and teach several courses: introductions to Old and New Testament; Jesus: His Life and Teachings; Paul; the Gospel of Matthew and Early Christianity. However, there were times when it was necessary for me to teach and lead seminars in Black, Liberation and Feminist Theology.

Florida State University

Section Instructor, 1984

The Religion and Sociology Departments offer a joint course on Death and Dying, which had an average class size of 300 students. This position was of a volunteer nature. I was in Tallahassee for the year preparing for my final field examinations at Columbia, and I volunteered to teach a section of the course and to provide additional resource material. My personal library has a large section on this topic, which I shared with my students.

Union Theological Seminary

Tutor, Biblical Field, 1978-1979

The position of Tutor is the equivalent of graduate student assistant or instructor. Responsibilities included teaching sections of courses, grading papers, student counseling, and providing assistance for faculty publications and research. Courses included Paul: His Life and Letters and The Parables of Jesus. I also created and held tutorials on doing exegesis and using the library for those students needing some extra help.

Florida State University

Teaching Assistant, 1976-1977

Responsibilities included teaching sections of the department's introduction to the New Testament, 19th and 20th Century Christian Thought, and Death and Dying. During the summer session of 1977, I was responsible for the grades and supervision of all 300 students in the course.
