

What will I be studying?

Film & New Media Studies is designed to teach students how to think actively, critically, and creatively, about the art of the moving image. To this end, it surveys significant examples of moving-image culture, including films from Hollywood and other global industries; experiments in documentary, avant-garde, and art cinema; and works from television, digital video, and the Internet.

Career Ideas!

Because moving-image media influence nearly every facet of our personal and professional lives, a degree in Film & New Media Studies prepares students for a wide variety of fields, including:

- Film, television, & digital video production
- Journalism
- Marketing & advertising
- Internet & social media
- Library & information sciences
- Museum studies
- Entertainment law
- Teaching & higher education
