Why Focus on Diversity in the Workplace?

Statistics on diversity in the workplace show that most companies need to consider greater inclusivity to create a more diverse workforce. Executives know that a diverse workforce - including differing races, religions, ages, genders and sexual orientations, person with disabilities and more - provides greater depth in perspective and viewpoints for the company. Those elements assist in developing new products and novel ways to cater to customers. Recent article "The Top 5 Diversity Workplace Statistics" articulates the benefits of diversity to include:

- Higher Revenue
- Increased Innovation
- More Effective Decision-Making
- Higher Rates of Job Acceptance from More Qualified Candidates
- Better Performance than Competitors

There are critical components required for any company to be competitive in tough markets while demonstrating consistent revenue growth. And now, with the heightened focus toward conversations of equity and inclusion, organizations of all sizes are working to make sure their mission and practices have that same focus. To that end, many leaders are seeking to embrace practices, initiatives, and tools designed to increase levels of diversity among employees.

But companies still fall short.

How does an organization foster inclusivity in the workplace?

Inclusivity and equity begin with an organizational exploratory process, transitions to policy making, changing the minds of people and finally the establishment of a sustainable business model that embraces diversity and inclusion.

About our Program

Program Details

The USF Muma College of Business assembled a group of world-class faculty and guest speakers to develop and deliver a learning experience designed to serve the needs of professionals and executives eager to better build and sustain diversity among their workforce and a culture of inclusion in order to increase effective communication and collaboration. The certificate program is ideal for Tampa Bay organizational managers, decision-makers for small, medium and large companies (both for- and not-for-profit), and entrepreneurs.

Participants can expect to learn from faculty in a productive, self-paced learning environment. All content is pre-recorded from the summer 2021 offering of the program. Completion of the program with a passing grade and a $99 fee will result in being granted the Diversity, Equity and Inclusion in the Workplace Certificate, issued by the Muma College of Business. The digital version of this certification will be sent to the participant by email. The $99 fee will also include a sharable digital badge that can be easily showcased on LinkedIn profiles. Participants wishing to access the content without receiving the badge or completion certificate may do so for free. The certificate program is self-paced, but participants need to complete all modules and quizzes by Thursday, March 31, 2022.
