

Bachelor of Arts in Religious Studies

In Religious Studies, students are exposed to a cross-cultural and multi-disciplinary study of the way in which both individuals and civilizations are deeply influenced by human religious experience. The goal is to enable the educated person to understand better the various ways in which religious values and institutions shape human behavior through a comparative study of religions and cultures. Such an education is invaluable for careers as diverse as journalism, law, medicine, business, as well as careers more directly related to the practice of religion. Majors in Religious Studies will also find courses designed to give them the methodological, theoretical and linguistic skills needed to go on to advanced graduate study in the field.

Entry-Level Positions

Church Administrator

Community Service Managers

Public Relations Specialist

Teacher, Secondary

Writer

Curriculum Information

Religious Studies Eight Semester Plan

Positions with a Graduate Degree

Directors, Religious Activities and Education

Lawyer

Politician

Professional Organizations and Related Resources

American Academy of Religion

American Association of Pastoral Counselors

American Theological Library Association

Society of Biblical Literature

Where else can I find information on this major?

Occupational Outlook Handbook

O*NET Online

USF Career Services