

Is an Online Degree Program RIGHT FOR YOU?

There is no right answer on whether to pursue an online or traditional program. Consider these three factors and make the choice that works best for you.

Online Program

Traditional Program

- Students who work full-time and have family obligations
- Students whose homes or offices are far from the university
- Students who want the option to study completely online

- Students who can travel to and attend courses on campus

- Students who are very organized and self-motivated to complete course readings and assignments

- Students whose home environments are distracting
- Students who need the structure and support of classroom learning

- Students who are comfortable with social interaction via video and online discussion

- Students who need the traditional classroom experience and face-to-face interaction with peers and instructors to be successful
