Joan A. Reid, Ph.D., LMHC is the Director of the USF Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Risk to Resilience Research Lab and Data Depository located at the USF St. Petersburg campus. Dr. Reid and her collaborators are working to transform Tampa Bay from a region characterized by a high risk for human trafficking to a region of resilience by linking and leveraging the expertise of interdisciplinary researchers across three USF campuses and strong community partnerships to address the problem of human trafficking. Dr. Reid has authored over 65 publications featured in prominent journals to include the American Journal of Public Health, Annals of Internal Medicine, Justice Quarterly, and Sexual Abuse, with the majority focused on sex trafficking of girls and boys in the United States. Recently, she was ranked as the 5th most active human trafficking researcher in the world. The impact of her research is extensive, impacting practice on both regional and national levels, and cited as guidance in human trafficking cases in various State Supreme Courts and in amicus brief for the U.S. Supreme Court case Jane Doe et al. vs. Backpage et al., U.S.16-276 (2016). As a licensed mental health counselor, Dr. Reid has experience providing trauma therapy to rape, sexual abuse, and human trafficking survivors.
