MOVING AWAY FROM DEFICIT MINDSET IN EVALUATION

Presented by:
Guizella A. Rocabado, M.Sc.

guizella.rocabado@gmail.com

Deficit mindset permeates the educational system at every level. Working with the mindset of “fixing students” is a disservice to them and to the larger educational structure. Providing alternate frameworks to a deficit ideology to review and evaluate programs and outcomes is useful for administrators, faculty, and student stakeholders in education.
