

Minor: Global Studies in Education

Why minor in the Global Studies in Education?

Employers and graduate programs seek candidates who exhibit the beliefs, attitudes, and behaviors necessary for engaging with youth in diverse and global settings. By earning this minor, students will gain knowledge about the relationships between education and the increasingly globalized world and learn how to apply this knowledge within diverse fields and professional settings.

Completing the minor in Global Studies in Education provides the opportunity to practice and apply global competencies such as awareness of one's role in the world, responsibility as a citizen and participation in the global community.

Who can earn this minor?

Any student in good academic standing can earn this minor. Some majors that pair well with this minor include International Relations, International Business, Political Science, Education, Communication, Sociology, and Anthropology. This minor is a Global Pathway program and helps students meet the requirements for the USF Global Citizens Award.
