Manager’s Corner

Three Cures for Virtual Meeting Fatigue

If you are a manager who spends a lot of time in virtual meetings, then you know that virtual meeting fatigue is a real thing. In this Forbes article, Three Cures For Virtual Meeting Fatigue, According to New Microsoft Research, learn about several ways to combat that fatigue.

LinkedIn Learning Course Spotlight

Creating Great First Impressions

Course instructor, Vanessa Van Edwards, is a lead investigator at Science of People, a human behavior research lab. She explains how to make a great first impression, whether by phone or in-person. While first impressions are formed quickly, there is a science behind it. Learn the strategies for a confident introduction including body language, voice and vocal cues, and best opening lines for a conversation.

5 Ways to Take Control of Your Time When You Work at Home

Time management is a skill, but like every skill, it takes practice. And for most of us, it will never quite be mastered, particularly when you work at home amid the chaos of family life. When you've finally got one big time waster in check, something else inevitably pops up. These tips for time management, which are for both telecommuters and home business owners, can help you pinpoint your time management problems before they get out of hand.

Working from Home with Kids

Although there is a good chance you've established somewhat of a routine through trial and error, you might be ready to try something new. In this article, educational experts and parents bring you advice and resources for getting work done with children in the house.