Campus Resources

USF's Voter Friendly Campus efforts are designed to support student democratic engagement and civic learning within a healthy campus political climate. A healthy campus political environment at USF is driven by USF's Principles of Community and leadership and civic engagement concepts (e.g. controversy with civility, conversations across difference, community engagement, and active citizenship) all within the bounds of community conduct expectations.

In preparation for variety of potential reactions to this year's election process, Student Success staff and students from across all three campuses have been developing resources and events to support a healthy post-election community. We encourage all USF Bulls to engage as active citizens while managing your health and wellness needs.

USF is filled with a number of valuable campus resources and organizations at all three campuses who can help you navigate the post-election environment from a place of community building and encouraging healthy behaviors. This is not a comprehensive list and we encourage you to reach out to areas of campus who can help you.

University Guiding Policies and Philosophies

USF Student Code of Conduct

The Student Code of Conduct provides USF students the expected standards of behavior. The conduct process is administered by Student Conduct and Ethical Development and the process is consistent on all three campuses.

USF Principles of Community

The Principles of Community at USF provide the campus a framework for our greater community in the ways we work with one another, approach conversations and uphold our university's values.

General Student Grievance Process

The Student Grievance Process provides students the opportunity to submit a report of alleged improper, unfair or arbitrary treatment by a USF department administrator and/or staff member.

Student Organizations

There are many student organizations across our three campuses who provide opportunity for you to build community with like-minded individuals and individuals with shared identities. Many of these organizations are hosting virtual events each week. You can utilize keywords or categories to find specific groups of organizations. On each organization's profile, utilize the "Join" or "Contact" features on the organization's profile page to share your interest and ask questions.
